

Psychic to teach profiling

Psychics may bring to mind visions of clouded crystal balls and tarot cards but Westside News journalist Reshni Ratnam spoke to one who plies her trade in the world of corporations and TV programs.

■ Improve relationships ... Julianna Suranyi is holding profiling seminars.

ASHGROVE psychic Julianna Suranyi has used her unique combination of skills in front of a live audience while filming a television pilot program aimed at US cable television.

Ms Suranyi said she was born a psychic and able to tell when someone's behaviour was inconsistent with their story, and able to "feel their brain work".

She recently put those skills to the test, filming the pilot program at the Judith Wright Centre in Fortitude Valley.

"I wanted to show that psychics can be professional, they hold integrity and that anything can be launched in Brisbane," she said.

Next month Ms Suranyi will hold seminars for the public designed to empower people to deal with everyday decisions and challenges.

She said the seminars were not about learning to be psychic.

Ms Suranyi said that from areas as diverse as forensics to corporate training, recruitment and family guidance, she has used her talents as an intuitive behavioural proffer and combined them with her psychic ability to assist government departments, major corporations, legal departments, childcare centres and families with her insight.

"Imagine if you knew what people were thinking, how they were going to react and what they were going to say before they did," she said.

"Profiling is a powerful tool that is often portrayed in television shows as only applying to forensics, but I have been teaching this in the corporate sector for years.

"I have found that these skills can totally and positively transform how a business or family functions and now I want to share these skills with as many people as possible to assist them in better understanding and managing their families, work environments and personal relationships."

■ Julianna Suranyi will hold profiling seminars on the weekends of March 21 and 22, and on April 4 and 5 at the Bardon Conference Centre. Visit www.julianna.com.au.
